

PRESS RELEASE

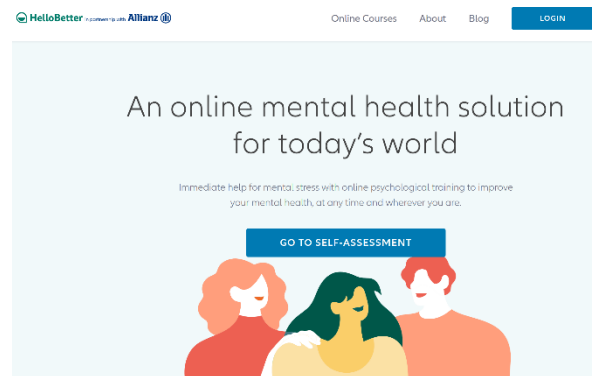

Allianz Partners and HelloBetter collaborate to scale-up access to digital mental health support

With one in four adults suffering from mental health disorders, mental health is a major challenge facing businesses today. In its mission to provide access to quality care as quickly and easily as possible, Allianz Partners is announcing a new partnership with digital mental health pioneer HelloBetter, to offer fully digital, scientifically-proven mental health solutions.

Digital technology and human interaction powered by science

Founded by internationally renowned research psychologists, HelloBetter online courses have been proven highly effective in over 30 randomized control trials and have been evaluated according to the highest standards of scientific practice. They offer a digital alternative to face-to-face therapy, allowing participants to achieve a comparable reduction of symptoms in only 6-8 weeks.

With HelloBetter, users can take charge of their mental wellbeing, when they have no mental health issues and would like to strengthen their mental fortitude, but also if they are looking to overcome more severe problems. An online portal acts as the main service hub, offering advice and tips from experts and inviting users to take a short mental health screening test. After the self-assessment, one of the following cognitive behavioral training programs is recommended to the user: stress, mental health problems in times of the corona-pandemic, depression and sleep problems. The level of proactive support from psychologists throughout the training program depends on the severity of the users' condition. When needed, the psychologists are also accessible to the user via a hotline number. The offer is currently available in English and German, with further languages planned for the future.

Users are already benefitting today

HelloBetter has already been rolled out to several Allianz operating entities, with plans to extend the service to other companies, as well as outside of Germany.

In addition, to support the general public during the pandemic, Allianz has sponsored HelloBetter to offer free psychological support to everyone living in Germany. Since mid-April, this offer has attracted a high level of interest – with thousands of users signing up to a free online course, calling the hotline and joining a Facebook support community. Free support for the general public is also available in English at “Calm through the Crisis” (A course will help strengthen the mental health during the COVID-19 pandemic).

Sirma Boshnakova, CEO of Allianz Partners comments: “Allianz Partners aims to be the peace of mind button for our customers, providing access to quality care as quickly and easily as possible. HelloBetter holistically supports employees’ mental wellbeing by providing a structured approach to maintaining good mental health, and a safe space to talk to professionals.”

Hannes Klopper, CEO of HelloBetter adds: “Mental health issues are a true burden for employees and employers alike. HelloBetter, the world's leading provider of digital mental health solutions, enables companies to offer their employees easy access to scientifically proven restoration and strengthening of their mental health and to increase employee satisfaction. We are thrilled that Allianz Partners will help us to deliver our solution to people in need, in the context of the Covid-19 pandemic and beyond.”
